

ENTHUSIASTIC PUPILS

maintain confidence and mindfulness!

Dear Parents,

It has been a busy term with examination preparations. Most importantly, we have worked closely with our pupils to maintain confidence and mindfulness over the past few weeks.

Our younger pupils continue to make excellent progress as they eagerly return to lessons each week with completed programs of study and bounds of enthusiasm to learn more.

Suggestions for the summer

Maths/ Reading Lists to improve literacy will be posted on our site and facebook soon!

We have compiled reading lists, hints for Maths /vocabulary development. This will keep your children productive with your encouragement on the maintenance of their skills on their own during the summer break.

"PARENTS – If you want your kids to thrive then do everything you can to encourage them.

Don't push them, demand from them or withhold your praise from them until they meet some standard you've set. Get behind them, invest in them and most importantly, become intimately involved in all that they do."

Language CURIOSITY

"From 'A' to 'ampersand', English is a wonderfully curious language"

From 'A' to 'ampersand', English is a wonderfully curious language. This A to Z of word origins, adapted from Haggard Hawks and Paltry Poltroons by Paul Anthony Jones, collects together 26 unusual etymologies - beginning with the last letter of the alphabet.

Until as recently as the early 1900s, "E" was considered a letter of the alphabet and listed after Z in 27th position. To avoid confusion with the word "and", anyone reciting the alphabet would add "per se". ("by itself") to its name, so that the bunkum

Proving that political long-windedness is nothing new, "bunkum" derives from Carolina's Buncombe County. The local congressman, Felix Walker, gave such a lengthy and unnecessary speech to Congress in 1820 that its name became a byword for any tediously nonsensical rubbish.

croupier

A croupier was originally merely a gambler's associate, whose job it was to back his companion's wagers and give extra cash and advice during play. In the sense of "one who sits behind another" it is derived from croupe, an old French word for the hindquarters of a horse.

dismantle

Adapted into English from French in the 1500s, "dismantle" literally means "to remove a mantle" - in other words, to take off a cloak.

The word "explode" is derived from the same Latin root as applause, and when it first appeared in the 17th century it actually meant "to jeer a performer off the stage". It was from this sense of expelling something violently that the modern meaning developed in the mid-1700s.

By the way, Daniel and Katerina are doing great, we have done a massive job with your and Rohini's guidance and help. Big thank you for that! They are now in good schools and we can relax a bit.

Kind regards,
Elena Romanova

Rohini has collected some lovely notes and she would like to thank her pupils for their enthusiasm and commitment. Take time off with a good book!

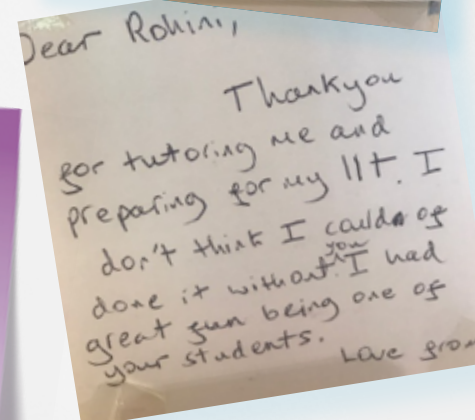

"Rohini, I just wanted to let you know that Jack got his maths results yesterday, 81% in one and 73% in the other.

He's so chuffed with himself and we are super pleased! Thank you, thank you, thank you!"

"Hi Rohini,

Just thought you would want to know that I had a meeting at school today and Evan has been moved up to middle set.

We are both really pleased!"

"A big improvement on last years results so we are really pleased and proud of him for all his hard work and effort and yours too!"

Amanda

"My suggestion for a summer break maths activity would be a daily mental arithmetic exercise book - either CGP mental workout book or the Schofield & Sims mental arithmetic. These are fairly short as a daily activity so it's easy to fit into a holiday schedule but helps keep the brain cells active."

Andy Hum - Mathematics tutor

"Sacha has made solid progress in his maths this year, mastering some of the building blocks of mathematics and is developing a healthy confidence in attempting problems. Keep up the good work Sacha!"
